Health is above anything else in this world, so it plays an important part in one's life. Here are some tips for staying in shape.

First, don't go to school or work without eating breakfast first. _15_ you do so, you'll get tired easily and then fail to keep your mind sharp. In this way, it is more possible for you to make mistakes at work. _16_ tip is to have a lot of drinks. Try to drink as much water or fruit juice as you can, and don't drink Coke or other drinks with a lot of sugar. Still another tip is to eat healthy food like vegetables and fish. With a strong body, you need to have a sound _17_, too. Exercise your mind by reading often and playing games. Also, building a healthy relationship is another good way to keep healthy. Some studies show that people with a lot of friends get sick less than those without. Friends make you _18_, and laughing is an important part of health. So be open about what you are feeling and try to understand what others are feeling. It is better, _19_, to stand strong on your own than be held back by friends. Keep the above tips in mind, and you'll enjoy a healthy life, not only physically but also mentally.

A-3. Reading Comprehension

It's the start of spring, and around the world, people are celebrating Holi. During this festival, people throw colored powder into the air. They throw it at each other, too!

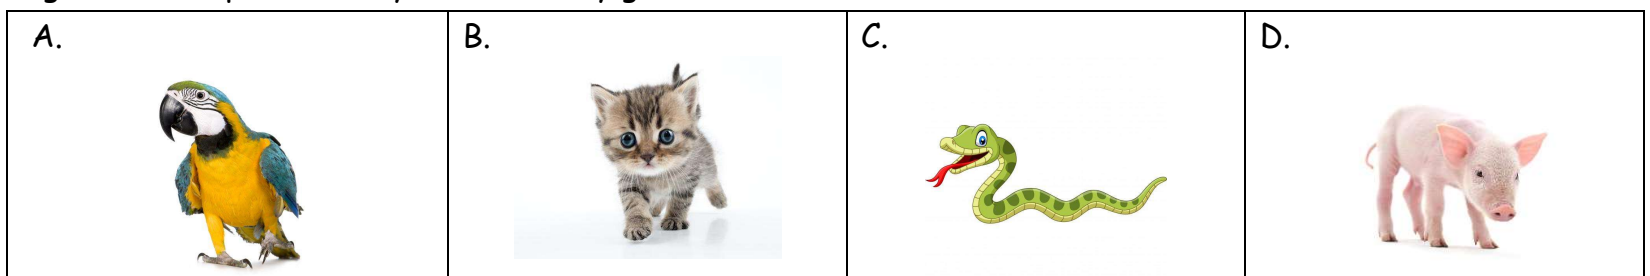

This Hindu festival started thousands of years ago. It marks the beginning of the harvest season. However, it is special in another way, too. During Holi, all the people in India join together and are treated equally. Usually this is not the case because of India's caste system. People think those of a higher caste are better than those of a lower caste. Yet everyone is the same at Holi.

20. Which of the following statements about Holi is NOT true?
- A. People throw powder of various colors to other people.
  - B. All people are equal during Holi even though they are usually treated differently in India.
  - C. It has been a long tradition to celebrate this Hindu festival.
  - D. Holi is celebrated in fall, which means the beginning of the harvest season.
21. According to this article, how do people in India usually think of other people?
- A. People throw the same colored powder to those who they like.
  - B. People think those of a lower caste are not as good as those of a higher caste.
  - C. All people are born to be equal.
  - D. Women are better than men in India.

Wayne and his parents had lived in River Town for years. Last month, they moved to an apartment building in Spring city. Wayne's parents work as nurses at a hospital there now. Wayne goes to school. He doesn't have any friends there yet. So he has no one to play with after school or on weekends. He's sad sometimes. He misses his friends in River Town.

Wayne wants to have a pet as a friend. He wants it to live in the glass case in his room. The pet should be very quiet. It should never bark or make any other noises. It shouldn't smell bad or be able to fly. Wayne also doesn't want to bathe it every day.

22. What does this story tell us about Wayne's parents?
- A. They own a book business.
  - B. They prepare great meals.
  - C. They work at desks all day.
  - D. They care for sick people.
23. Wayne's parents are taking him to a pet market today. Look at these pictures of pets and check the story again. Which pet will Wayne most likely get?

Many successful people were nerds when they were kids, and I was one of them. When I was about 12 years old, I made my own messaging program. I called it "Zucknet." My family used it so we could communicate with each other by sending messages from different rooms. It seems funny now, but when I look back on it, that was where my passion truly started to grow.

As I got older, I really benefited from the support of my parents. They hired a tutor for me. His name was David Newman, and once a week he would come to our house and teach me about computer programming. I got pretty good at it, too. Before I was ready to graduate from high school, I was offered jobs from several companies, such as AOL and Microsoft. However, I turned them down. There was something I had to do first.

After high school, I attended Harvard University. There I was known as the "computer guy" on campus. I developed a program that helped students pick their courses. I even began toying with an early version of Facebook called Facemash, but it got shut down by the school.

Later, a few of my classmates came to me. They wanted me to expand the idea and work for them. I started working with them, but later branched out on my own. They weren't happy about this, but that's another story for another time. I called my site The Facebook at first. I wanted it to help people connect with one another based on mutual interests, shared backgrounds, and so on.

I ran Facebook out of a dorm room until the operation outgrew it. In my sophomore year, I decided to take a chance. I dropped out of school and moved the whole company to Palo Alto, California. By 2004, we had a million users. Today, in 2017, we have over 1.86 billion users. Things haven't always gone smoothly, though. There have been lawsuits and other troubles along the way, but I keep following my dreams. I believe the results will speak for themselves.

24. What is the main purpose of this passage?

- A. To introduce a big company.
- B. To discuss how technology advances.
- C. To describe how someone developed his/her interest.
- D. To point out the problems of online businesses.

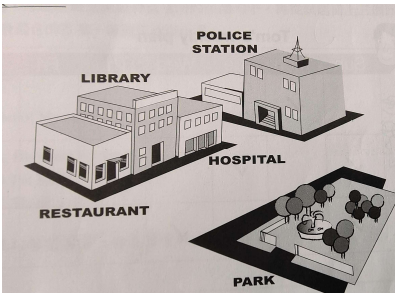

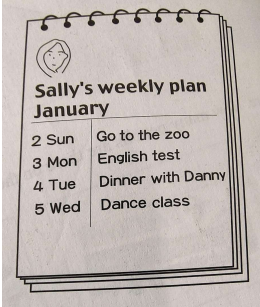

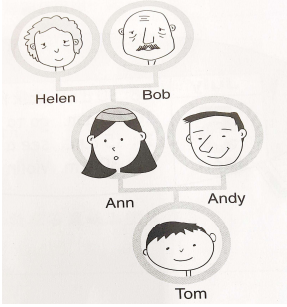

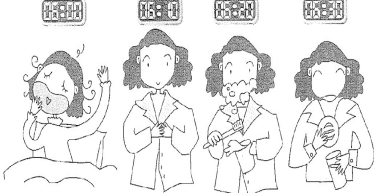

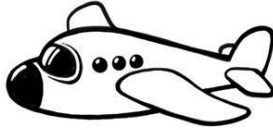

25. What did the writer's family use the program he made when he was 12 years for?

- A. To do their shopping online.
- B. To make friends online.
- C. To sign up for their courses online.
- D. To talk to one another online.
